OVERVIEW

One of the most stunning treks in Uttarakhand is the Kuari Pass trek, which is situated in the heart of the Garhwal Himalayas. Its ease makes it a godsend for anyone who isn't up for a strenuous hike but yet wants to enjoy the wonderful sense of meandering through the pathways of largely untouched nature. Because Lord Curzon just so happened to find this trip route, the trek is recognized as Lord Curzon's Trails. The trek's highest point is 12,763 feet above sea level. The trek is made even more alluring and engaging by the local flora and animals.

The journey begins at Joshimath, which is located in the Himalayan region of Chamoli. In the Gharwal area of the Himalayas, Joshimath has gradually gained popularity as a gathering place for pilgrims and hikers. The Pancha-Prayag, or Devprayag, Karnaprayag, and Rudraprayag are among the region's many permanent rivers, which are in addition to the area's powerful mountain ranges. The Himalayan peaks, which unquestionably make up the trek's heart, can be seen in all directions from various points along the route. The little rural towns you will pass through on your trip uphill are a cultural gem that this trail also contains. Your understanding of mountain folks' culture and way of life will be enhanced.

The trek passes through pristine, snow-covered oak, rhododendron, and deodar forests. Watch for the Mounts Kamet, Chaukhamba, Trishul, and Nanda Devi Dawn vistas while on this trek. There have also been reports of leopard paw tracks and Himalayan black bears on the ascent. Nearly the whole length of the path has a deep forest cover with a mixture of oak, rhododendron, and various coniferous trees. peeks of pink and white cherry blossoms may be seen in March. The path is nothing less than a trekker's heaven with its mix of flat and mountainous terrain that is mostly covered in snow. Come join us on a trek to Kuari Pass!

THINGS TO CARRY

- Backpack (Minimum 55 Ltrs with rain cover): Choose a high-quality backpack with a comfortable fit and straps that do not cause shoulder pain. For a quality trekking backpack, you can visit the nearest Decathlon location.
- Daypack (20 - 30 Ltrs): When ascending to the summit, you are required to carry only a few essential items; therefore, you will need a daypack since you will leave your larger pack at the campsite.
- Floater or sandals: Although the entire trek requires sturdy footwear, your feet must be able to breathe to prevent chafing and blisters. A good pair of sandals and floaters will allow you to move freely in the camp.
- Good trekking footwear is comfortable, provides ankle support, and has excellent traction. Instead of being bulky, they should be lightweight and durable.
- 3 Pairs of Quick-Dry T-Shirts: You must carry at least three pairs of quick-dry t-shirts so that you can launder them between stops for the sake of hygiene.
- Quicky DryTrek Pant: A high-quality pair of polyester track pants will allow your skin to breathe. They are lightweight, quick-drying, and comfortable for walking. You can avoid chafing and rashes by purchasing a quality pair of track pants.
- 3 Pairs of Cotton Socks: Cotton socks are extremely lightweight and comfortable to move around in, so you can always rely on a good pair of cotton socks while trekking. However, remember to replace them frequently and avoid wearing them when they are wet.
- 1 Pair of Woollen Socks: A quality pair of woollen socks, preferably merino, is comfortable, inhibits odours, and provides sufficient insulation from the cold so that they can be worn at night.
- 1 Poncho: A poncho is an evolved form of a raincoat that protects both your body and your belongings from the rain.

- Padded/Heavy Jacket: It is emphasized that you must bring appropriate layers to avoid getting cold; therefore, you must bring a heavy jacket that can be worn over your other clothing.
  - Thermal is a type of clothing that aids in keeping the body warm during cold weather. A high-altitude trek necessitates the use of this essential item.
  - A towel that dries quickly will aid in maintaining proper hygiene. The wet fabric increases the likelihood of bacterial growth; therefore, it must dry quickly.
  - Windbreaker Jacket: As you ascend to a high altitude, you are subjected to chilly winds, which a windbreaker jacket is designed to repel. They are made of lightweight synthetic fibres.
  - Woolen Cap: When ascending to a high altitude, a woollen cap will help prevent the onset of frostbite. When travelling at high altitudes, you can also cover your ears to prevent any pain and discomfort you may experience in them.
  - Insulated gloves help maintain proper body temperature in the hands and provide a better grip on trekking poles.
  - Sun Cap: A lightweight sun cap with side flaps is ideal for preventing sunburns and keeping your head cool on sunny days.
  - 1 Scarf or Balaclava: In addition to sun rays and chilly winds, you are also exposed to dirt and grime during treks; therefore, it is essential to carry a scarf or balaclava so you can cover your face when necessary.
  - Lip balm: Due to the harsh cold winds, your lips may become chapped, so it is important to keep them moisturized.
  - Cold Cream & Sunscreen (SPF 40+): To prevent sunburns and chafing, you must apply both cold cream and sunscreen.
  - Antibacterial powder: To prevent rashes caused by a bacterial infestation in your armpits and elsewhere on your body, Use antibacterial powder.
  - Water Bottle: The importance of hydration during hiking cannot be overstated. It is essential to carry a water bottle that can be refilled with Himalayan water.

- Torchlight and Headlight: A flashlight or even a headlamp with fresh batteries should always be brought along.
- A ziplock bag containing all of your toiletries, including napkins, toothpaste, hand sanitizers, and paper soap, should be carried.
- Personal Basic Medical Kit: A few cuts and bruises are almost inevitable on a hike, so it is necessary to carry a medical kit containing bandages, Dettol, etc.
- Dark Sunglasses / Spectacle Wearers (Instead of Contact Lenses, Use Photochromic Glasses): Photochromatic glasses are designed to transform into anti-glare tints in response to sunlight exposure. They are effective eye protection, but clip-on glasses, etc., are also available.
- The trekking pole provides assistance in multiple ways. It conserves energy while providing stability and aiding in maintaining balance.
- Extra Polythene: If your clothes become wet or do not dry, you can transport them in polythene. However, ensure that all plastics you bring into the woods are taken out with you. Do not litter in mountainous areas.
- Camera: This should go without saying. To ensure that you capture all the memorable moments of your hike. Make sure you have sufficient storage space and extra batteries.
